Black Canyon Builders Wins Sustainability Award at 2013 Durango Parade of Homes

DURANGO, COLO. (October 29, 2013) –Black Canyon Builders is proud to accept the 2013 Durango Parade of Homes Sustainability Award for the remodel of an historic home in downtown Durango. Additionally, the home earned second place in the “Significant Remodel, $500,000 - $1 million” category. The honor was announced by the Home Builders Association of Southwest Colorado at a gala on October 17, 2013.

Along with sustainable features such as a solar domestic hot water system, in-floor heating and Energy Star® appliances, the Black Canyon Builders home was recognized for repurposing a significant amount of lumber – structurally and artistically – from the original structure.

“We’re honored. Thanks to the HBASC, the judges and to the community for its ongoing support of the Parade of Homes,” said Jared Ogden, president of Black Canyon Builders. “Living in a town with such a rich history adds to the charm of these old houses. By salvaging wood and other materials that have developed such character over the years, I feel like we’re continuing the Durango legacy – even if in a small way. Plus, the repurposed materials are simply beautiful. I’d like to thank the owners of the home for sharing this vision. On behalf of myself and all of my colleagues who worked on the home, we are grateful.”

The award marks back-to-back wins for Black Canyon Builders in the green and sustainable building field. The company earned “Best Green Building” at the 2012 Parade of Homes for a timber frame home.
